Lecture 4: Logistic Regression and Classification

Heading: Logistic Regression
Logistic Regression adapts linear models for binary classification by passing a linear combination of inputs through the sigmoid activation function to output a probability between 0 and 1. Parameters are estimated using maximum likelihood estimation and optimized using gradient descent with binary cross-entropy loss.